

The Spiritual Significance Of Music

BLOODWORK

MICHAEL BRYZAK

Music has always been more than just notes and order. It's something deeper that as a musician I can use to change my emotions and spiritual outlook. This is mostly through the lyrics, but also can often be through the actual sound and mood of the music and the artwork. From my own experience, I would say that sometimes music can carry a kind of spiritual weight with it. Some music can open up doors to spiritual realms, both good and bad, sometimes to praise God, and sometimes to bring a demonic presence. This of course can't be proved, and can be written off as emotion. However, I've experienced it myself on many occasions, for darkness and for light. It cannot go against your will, but opens the opportunity for other things. Music can stir within us things that can only be stirred by music. Music and creating is a gift, and can be used for the positive and negative influence of people dependent upon how they receive the music and it's initial purpose. Without music we would lose a part of our created being and one of the greatest joys in life.

MICHAEL BRYZAK

GUITARIST AND VOCALIST IN BLOODWORK