I believe music is a way to communicate with a person. Sounds, tones, and lyrics just seem to be able to break into life experiences of a person that simple conversation cannot do. I can't really explain how that works, I don't know the physical reasons for music having an effect on our emotions and brain waves and what not, but I know God has designed it. Like all things that God designed though, human beings can use it for good or for bad, there is the Kingdom of light within some music and then there is the Kingdom of darkness within music as well. Music is used as some kind of medium that allows a person in the physical to touch and connect with something in the spiritual then I think, whether it themselves, God or something else.
