

The Spiritual Significance Of Music

ANGELCORPSE

PETE HELMKAMP

Force made voice. Barbarism reconstituted as an art form. The surrealism of the real. Yet the real is nothing more than what we create, and creation is nothing more than what we can destroy. And destroy we shall, in the effort to mold and shape things as we see fit. Therefore, it is possible to surmise that every pulse of our music beats as one with our hearts, in our blood, in our actions and deeds, and that in and of itself, and that alone, is the Teitan that dwells within us.
