SONIC SYNDICATE

I believe that music is a tool to stimulate the human brain, because whether we want it or not, listening to music always affects you in one way or another. From a fragile and beautiful piano melody to the most scorching guitar shredding, your brain will always suck up the information and render it as emotions for you. Engulfed with a meaty amount of dynamic feelings triggers the creative side of your brain which in turn inspires your daily life, and I guess that is really the reason for music; to deliver a package of various feelings right into your brain. So ultimately I would say that the spiritual significance of music is the power or ability to extract feelings and emotions from the mind.
