

GANDALF

My musical path and my spiritual life can not be separated from each other. Music has the ability to tell us more about our spiritual nature than words ever could. It is hard to imagine a world without music, it is a real blessing, a most wonderful divine gift, helping us to approach the deepest secrets of the universe beyond the limitations of our rational understanding. In most cultures, music has been and still is being used for spiritual rituals and for worshipping and thanking the Godhead. Since I started playing music in the days of my youth, I felt connected to a mysterious deeper region within myself in a very special way. Creating music is like practicing meditation, opening the heart to your never-drying inner source, like passing the gates into a hidden sanctuary. Beethoven said about music: "That what should touch the heart must come from above, otherwise it is only notes – a body without a spirit!" True music can be a messenger of pure divine love, transferring beams of the ever-shining light within all of us into the world, from one heart to many others.
